A Journey from Grief to Joy (A Traveller's Tales) by Jean Jarvis

There was little left to attach her to life. After her husband's tragic death, aged just thirty-seven, the author's life was stripped bare. She had no partner, her parents were dead, she had no children, nor a job. She was lost in a bleak landscape that was so hostile that she did not know how she could possibly navigate her way through its terrain.

The book follows how she coped with this harsh new life that had been thrust upon her and ultimately how she found a new and joyful life which took her on spiritual adventures to faraway places. In telling her story she hopes that others who have experienced loss will find inspiration.
