The Perfect Gift for Aspiring Haruspices!

By Caroline Kenner from The Fool's Dog

If you have ever been tantalized by the thought of ancient forms of divination that are not feasible to research today, look no further. Archdruid Emeritus of ADF Druidry Skip Ellison has done the field work for us in this fascinating little volume.

Through Skip's work, we can approach the ancient practice of Haruspicy, divination through examining the entrails, in this case the liver, of animals sacrificed as offerings to the Gods and Goddesses of the ancients. This method was widespread in the ancient world, and used by a number of different cultures. We have found clay model livers--one of which is pictured on the cover--from Babylon, designed to teach aspiring Haruspices, and the famous Piacenza Bronze Model Liver from Etruscan culture.

This book is a serious work, designed to help us understand the ancient divinatory form without all the butchery. However, when I announced to Druidic friends that I was getting Skip's book and the accompanying set of Liver Cards available through Gamecrafter, I was told that they were originally created in fulfillment of a bet between Archdruids, about which ancient form of divination was the most unlikely to be revived in the present day, chuckle! This knowledge added to my enjoyment of the book and the cards.
